

Some writing prompts to get you started!

Start a story with one of these:

We've all done things that we regret.

At first, we trusted the technology.

"I know what I'm doing," I told her, but I didn't know and we both knew it.

The noise was like a thousand firecrackers exploding on cue.

Finish a story with one of these:

The future was waiting and now I was ready for it.

That crazy grin was the last thing I saw.

The music went on.

Somewhere, somehow, the truth would be known someday.

Write a story that challenges something known:

For example, change the dominant expectations of the audience. What do they expect of your protagonist? Can they change it? Can the world?

Start your life knowing everything that will happen and gradually forget it. Find ways to try and remember.

What if you realise no-one else sees colour, or hears music, or can taste food, not like you? Write this story.